Iowa Library Association
Annual Conference
Coralville Marriott Hotel
and Conference Center
October 10-12, 2007
Welcome to the Iowa Library Association 2007 Annual Conference!

We have a fabulous conference planned for you.

This year’s conference theme is Iowa Libraries: Cultivating the Future. The Conference Planning Committee has done a wonderful job of planning a program with broad appeal and events that will help you harvest ideas, contacts, experiences, and friendships to take home with you to your library.

A record number 45 concurrent sessions are being offered this year but remember that some of the most valuable moments of conference take place at lunch, in the exhibit hall or even the hallway. Enjoy extended networking and fun during breaks or some of the special evening events. Cultivating and maintaining professional contacts is one of the best reasons for attending a conference. Some of the best and brightest people in our profession are attending this conference. Try to meet someone new everyday!

I challenge you to attend one session out of your main area of interest. I always gain something from every session I attend. It might give you a different perspective on what you do or could do in your library. Venture out of your comfort zone when choosing a session.

Exhibitors support our conference in many ways. In addition to their commitment to purchase exhibit space many of them also sponsor sessions, provide refreshments and purchase advertising. Please make time to visit the exhibits hall and thank them for their support.

Attending a professional conference can be a revitalizing experience. I hope you return to your library inspired, reinvigorated, and armed with new tools and techniques to help your library “Cultivate the Future.”

Considering a green library?

“Going green” for your building project can result in reduced operating costs, conservation of resources and healthier, more productive visitors and staff. Let Engberg Anderson Design Partnership help you create a library building that sets an example for a greener, healthier community. As a leader in sustainable design, our LEED® certified architects and designers can help you with responsible yet exciting alternatives to traditional systems for a healthier building, staff and planet.

Our design for the Iowa City Public Library in Iowa City, IA was developed in cooperation with MidAmerican Energy in an effort to minimize long-term energy consumption and earn financial incentive payments for the library and was subsequently featured as an example of the best energy conscious design at the 2001 International Congress of Energy & Environmental Building Association.

At the Oaklyn Branch Library in Evansville, IN, the library’s green roof serves as a practical design solution, resolving the challenge presented by the 50-foot sloping hillside site as well as introducing environmental benefits and lowering operational costs.

Currently in design, the new Gail Borden Public Library West Side Branch in Elgin, IL features cool daylighting strategies and optimized energy performance along with an alternate for geothermal ground source energy. The project is targeting a LEED® Silver certification.
